Ottawa bus fares and taxes are on the move — upward

► City to borrow extra $125 million to finance accelerated roadwork ► Transit fares to go up 2.5% next summer after city cut $20 million from the system ► 2.39% property-tax increase will add $75 for average urban home

Mayor Jim Watson is promising improvements to OC Transpo, roads and cycle paths in the 2012 budget, with a tax increase of 2.39 per cent.

"Budget 2012 restricts the annual increase to 2.39 per cent for the coming year — the lowest rate in five years," Watson said yesterday in a speech at city hall.

The draft budget can be changed through a consultation process before it is approved in the new year, but Watson asked councillors and city staff to respect the budget framework introduced yesterday.

The tax hike notwithstanding, Watson touted the city's ability to save money.

"Management and council led by example last year, cutting office budgets, freezing compensation for elected officials and reducing discretionary spending across the board," he said. "I am proposing that these measures stay in place this year."

Watson said the number of city staff shrank last year, for the first time since 2004, by the equivalent of 74 full-time positions, worth $3.4 million.

No one will be laid off as a result, but some people will be moved and retrained, city manager Kent Kirkpatrick said.

After the speech, many councillors said they believe their constituents would be happy with the 2.39 per cent increase because it's less than the 2.5 per cent year-over-year hike that Watson has been promising to meet or beat since his election campaign last year.

"We promised we'd stay under 2.5 per cent and we've come in at 2.39 per cent, which is really good news," said Coun. Tim Tierney of Beacon Hill-Cyrville.

"It's a good-news budget and I'm very happy with it."

Police to meet tax increase cap

The Ottawa Police Service will be able to meet with a 2.5 per cent increase to their share of property tax, according to their draft 2012 budgets tabled Wednesday morning.

If approved, the 2012 net operating budget will be $246.7 million — $9.3 million more than 2011, representing a tax increase of $13 per year for the average urban household, police officials said.

The service expects an $8.6 million increase in compensation for its 1,363 officers and 583 civilian members — but that number is an estimate because collective agreements with the Ottawa Police Association and the Senior Officers Association expired in January 2011 and new agreements are under negotiation.

“Human resource costs in policing, when all you provide is human resource response is a pressure on us all the time,” said Chief Vern White, adding he is not part of the labour talks.

Staffing costs make up 84 per cent of the gross operating budget and the police service is not planning to expand staffing until 2015. Until then, the service will conduct a review to make sure resources are deployed in the most effective way, said White.

Transit gassed up with cash

The city will put an extra $5.5 billion into OC Transpo's 2012 budget after cutting nearly $20 million with the route optimization plan this fall.

Mayor Jim Watson and Transit Commission Chair Diane Deans both said the new money doesn't mean the city cut too deeply.

“We always said we'd be tweaking when we go through this massive change in routes and structure and so on,” said Watson. “The fact of the matter is passenger rates are increasing, which is a good thing, but some routes are still overcrowded.”

After the changes, riders and councillors complained about dangerously overcrowded buses.

“Budget 2012 provides a targeted $2.3 million in funds to boost capacity on routes such as the 87, 94, 95 and 96, that we have all heard from passengers about,” said Watson, in his budget speech.

The changes that come as a result of the $2.3 million will start to take effect, and reduce bus congestion, in January, even though the money isn't budgeted until the next fiscal year begins, said Deans. OC Transpo officials are to present a plan to ease overcrowding before year end.

OC Transpo will also decide how to implement a 2.5 per cent fare hike with a new fare table that will likely take effect next summer, said Deans.

The idea of an increase didn't sit well with some riders.

“The bus pass for adults is already $100. I'd rather take the $100 and put it in gas. There are lot of people that's not going to the bus anymore if it goes

Developers get an earful

Mayor Jim Watson put the city's developers on notice yesterday morning, dedicating a sternly worded section of his budget speech especially to them.

“Understand me clearly, these next sentences are for the developers and builders listening. Some are treating zoning and community design plans as mere suggestions, and that will end,” he said. He added, though, that environmentally-friendly projects will get an easier time with approvals.

It's a welcome change, said College Ward Councillor and Planning Committee member, Rick Chiarelli, who added the message is directed to planning staff, as well.

When planning staff bring recommendations to committee it usually passes, because it carries their “expert opinion,” Chiarelli said.

“And if it doesn't pass, that report becomes the evidence used against us at the (Ontario Municipal Board) OMB, and chances are we'll lose there.”

● JESSICA SMITH

Cash will hit the roads

Expect roadwork over the next three years as the city spends more than $340 million over the next three budgets on roads, bridges, sidewalks and bike lanes as part of a project dubbed Ottawa on the Move.

To complete the projects, the city will take on an extra $125 million in tax-supported debt.

Mayor Jim Watson cited a “perfect storm” for launching the project now: current cheap interest rates and a need to get roadwork done before Canada's 150th birthday and construction for the LRT, which begins in 2014.

Donation to help CHEO treat suicidal youth

► Children's hospital had 220 attempted suicides in emergency in 2010

JOE LOFARO
@METRONEWS.CA

Mental health research at the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario (CHEO) is getting a $500,000 boost after receiving a $250,000 donation from Scotiabank yesterday.

The CHEO Foundation will match Scotiabank's donation. The funds will help advance mental-health research and patient-care treatment programs at CHEO for youth who are suicidal.

CHEO's Big Steps fundraising campaign chair Charles Ofori-Attah, said the donation is poignant after the recent teen suicides of Daron Richardson and Jamie Hubley. He said the work done by CHEO's chair of child and mental-health research, Dr. John Lyons, will help get a dialogue going about mental health.

"We can't be keeping it in the shadows, we can't be sweeping it under the rug," said Ofori-Attah. "The research being done by Dr.

Lyons is going to bring it to the forefront."

The mothers of Daron Richardson and Jamie Hubley sat next to each other at the announcement Tuesday. Jamie's mother, Wendy, wore a rainbow-coloured ribbon and a uni-

Daron's mother, Stephanie Richardson, said she's hopeful research will advance the understanding of suicide and will lead to more effective treatment for youth.

Sex trade is a family business

► Son introduced prospective employees to mom after working with them at phone help line for troubled teens

JAMES TURNER
@METRONEWS.CA
METRO CANADA IN WINNIPEG

A Winnipeg mom met prospective new sex-trade employees for her brothel through her son, who befriended them after working with them at a telephone chat line for troubled youth, a Manitoba court has heard.

Police and justice officials uncovered this and other surprising details about the city's sex-trade after being tipped to probe activities at the now-shuttered bordello on a quiet Wolseley street in June 2009.

"She preyed on no one. What she did was illegal, yes. But she tried to provide a safe environment for those who chose to participate."

EVAN ROITENBERG, LAWYER

A 48-year-old mother of two pleaded guilty yesterday to running a bawdy house. The Crown dropped other charges, including a count of corrupting children. The criminal case against the woman's ex-husband was also quashed.

A publication ban prevents publishing any information identifying people at the heart of the high-profile case, including the woman's children, who were 11 and 17 at the time of her arrest and lived in the home. A system was in place to ensure the younger child wasn't there when clients visited, court heard.

Following two weeks of surveillance, a police raid led to the seizure of business records showing the woman employed upwards of 12 sex-trade workers across various periods starting in early 2008.

The records included schedules of workers' various shifts, along with financial ledgers and Internet chat logs.

Quebec will not bite bullet on gun registry

The Harper government's plan to not only kill the long-gun registry but subsequently bury its data has run into resistance in Quebec, which wants to bring the controversial program back from the dead.

The provincial government says it intends to keep using the gun registry on its territory and will fiercely oppose plans to destroy the data.

Speaking at a news conference in Quebec City, Public Security Minister Robert Dutil yesterday refused to rule out legal action among his options.

A spokesman later explained that the province's Plan A is to maintain a respectful dialogue with Ottawa and negotiate a mechanism to save the records. If that fails, Plan B options will be weighed. THE CANADIAN PRESS

China puts limits on reality TV

- ▶ Government says shows are 'overly entertaining'
- ▶ Viewer voting seen as too similar to Western elections

China plans to limit reality TV shows and other light entertainment fare shown on satellite television stations as part of a drive to wrest back Communist Party control over cultural industries that are fuelling more independent viewpoints.

The order from the State Administration of Radio, Film and Television, known as SARFT, refers to shows that are vulgar or "overly entertaining."

The changes aim to "meet the public's demand for varied, multilevel, and high quality viewing," said the order, published yesterday.

"Satellite channels are mainly for the broadcast of news propaganda and should expand the proportion of news, economic, cultural, science and education, children's, and documentary programming," the order said.

Cracking down

The government order singles out programs dealing with marital troubles and matchmaking, talent shows, game shows, variety shows, talk shows and reality programming.

- ▶ Such shows must be largely phased out by the beginning of next year by the country's 34 satellite TV stations, to be replaced with news and cultural programming.

The order follows a Communist Party meeting last week that asserted the need for strengthening social morality and boosting China's cultural influence abroad — a recognition by the party that it is losing its power to dictate public opinion. Social media, especially hugely popular microblogs that encourage individuals to generate content, are also being targeted by government censors.

The restrictions had been expected for some time and media reports said stations were already tailoring their programming to conform. Most were already cutting contest shows in which viewers vote for their favourite contestant, a concept frowned on by party cadres who don't permit competitive elections or other facets of Western-style democracy.

5-year-old driver calls police

Authorities say a five-year-old looking for her mother backed a car out of the driveway, then called police dispatchers for help.

Mansfield, Ohio, police say Ameleah Kegley backed the car out Monday evening after returning from school to an empty house.

According to the Mansfield News Journal newspaper, her mother had gone to the hospital with an emergency and her father never got the message.

Worried that her mother wasn't home, Ameleah decided to look for her. She backed her mother's car down the sloped driveway, and it came to a stop on grass across the street.

The girl dialed police dispatchers, explained the situation and asked for quick help getting the car back home because she said her mom would be upset with her.

The dark world of Mexico's cops

► Policing in Monterrey, Mexico, has become a risky business ► This year so far, 100 officers have been killed
► Metro delves into the world of Mexico's law enforcers and spends a day with them to learn how they work

Being a cop in Monterrey is considered a high-risk profession. The police in the capital of Mexico's northeastern state of Nuevo León receive constant death threats from drug-gang members and then do battle with them on the streets. Some extort money from citizens to make up for their meagre wages. Others receive payments from traffickers and become a halcón, or hawk, a kind of cartel informant.

If a cop doesn't comply with warring narcotic cartels, he'll be targeted and removed. So far this year, 100 law enforcers have been killed either by gunfire or grenade explosions.

At 7 p.m., we join a squadron in a local police station in downtown Monterrey. The team of three men and a woman begin patrolling Vista Hermosa, the Jewish quarter of the city until 7 a.m. At the doors to a convenience store, the guards stand on duty while eating some snacks. They carry high-calibre weapons and are protected by bulletproof vests. They drive an amped-up pickup truck.

Drinking on the street, grand and petty theft, damage to personal and commercial property and carrying weapons are the most common crimes in one night. On a quiet night, this station receives up to seven complaints of grand theft auto.

Back at the convenience store, we notice that the law enforcement officials are calm and chat among themselves. And yet, clientele to the convenience store look restless and agitated by the presence of the police, undoubtedly due to the bad image they have earned over the years, either because they are easy targets for criminals to shoot at, or because they are easy pawns for drug traffickers to exploit and use.

Last February, Homero Guillermo Salcido Treviño, head of intelligence for Nuevo León state, was found dead, his body in a truck that caught fire in the centre of Monterrey — after he was kidnapped by two fellow officers.

"The worst thing is you do not know which of your colleagues is selling you out to the bad guys," said one of Treviño's relatives.

In truth, it appears what comes out of your pocket could be the real difference between life or death, as we found out in our night in the police station's jail cells.

Field notes

A NIGHT IN THE CELLS

From the first minute I knew I was going into the local police station in downtown Monterrey my nerves went wild. By the back entrance, prisoners arrive, mostly for minor offences or positive alcohol tests.

Out of a group of two men and one woman, all of whom seem to be friends, one man is free to go. The 30-something was told his friends could be set free if they each pay $150. If not, 12 hours in the cells.

Beside the front door of the police station is an ATM from where he could get the money.

The police do not lose sight of the guy. He pays the fine; however, the police ask him to accompany them. They go down to the basement.

There, another officer asks for an increase in payment to speed up the release of his friends.

"How much is it?" the guy asks. "How much do you have?" the policeman replies.

The young man offers $37, but the police say they will not accept anything less than $225.

Again the police escort him to the ATM and ask if he has more money.

The man says his account has reached the limit and he can't withdraw more cash.

In the end, the 24-year-old girl is set free. It takes two hours for the second guy to be released.

Police corruption

1 In the San Pedro district of Monterrey, those arrested for drinking-and-driving offences can accelerate the processing of their case by paying law enforcers a small fee. Foreign nationals, however, are exempt from this processing to avoid diplomatic confrontations and are released immediately.

2 Up to $150 in cash is what detainees have to pay upfront to avoid a night in the cells.

3 While in some municipalities in the Monterrey metropolitan area drivers can get rid of the penalties for drunk driving for up to $8, bribing a San Pedro traffic official becomes an impossible mission.

4 Out of 100 times police filed a report, 10.3 times the citizens paid a fee. On average they pay up to $13. More than 200 million acts of corruption reportedly occurred last year at all government levels, costing Mexicans $2.4 billion.

Two surveys, same dread from consumers

► Consumer confidence hits lowest level since 2009, representing the fifth decline over the last six months

Consumer confidence has dipped to levels last reported two and a half years ago during the depths of the recession, as Canadians grapple with higher everyday costs, record debt and fears of another major downturn.

The Conference Board of Canada said yesterday that its index of consumer confidence fell 3.3 points to 71.8. The index, based on a survey conducted this month, is measured against a reading of 100 in 2002.

The drop overshadows a slight improvement in September after a dismal report in August.

A separate survey released yesterday by the Royal Bank of Canada garnered the same results.

Both indicators come as Canadians deal with higher prices for gasoline, food and clothing, not to mention record debt loads spurred by ultra-low interest rates, as well as stock market turmoil that has eroded nest eggs amid signs of slowing economic growth.

"If you look at the economic environment of late and all the doom and gloom out there and talk of double-dip recession and Europe default and the like, obviously consumers are picking up on that negative sentiment," said Craig Wright, chief economist at RBC.

Economists watch consumer confidence closely because household spending accounts for more than half of overall economic activity in Canada. However, it can be an unreliable indicator because it relies on what people say about their intentions rather than their actual behaviour.

Slower growth could put pressure on hiring as well as household finances, spelling trouble for Canadians who have taken advantage of record low interest rates to amass record levels of debt.

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty and Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney have been warning for months that Canadians have been racking up more debt

► A Royal Bank of Canada sign is shown in Toronto's financial district. A survey by the Royal Bank of Canada suggests more than half of Canadians have no savings set aside for a rainy day and many who do dip into them to help pay for everyday expenses.

Surveys say

- Only 36 per cent of respondents believed now is a good time to make a major purchase, says the Conference Board survey.
- Consumers showed optimism about future job creation, says the survey.
- Ontario and B.C. consumer confidence declined the most, while in the Prairie provinces it improved.

- The RBC survey indicated in the next year, 33 per cent of respondents planned to reduce debt, 30 per cent intended to spend less, 21 per cent expected to save more and 21 per cent planned to do all three.

High gas prices are for real

The Bank of Canada says Canadians aren't imagining things when they notice gas prices are unusually high given the posted price of crude oil.

The bank confirmed yesterday that the price of gasoline in Canada has increased by more than the price of WTI (West Texas Intermediate) oil. And gas prices have largely failed to decline in conjunction with WTI, it noted.

That doesn't mean Canadians are getting ripped off. The bank said gas prices are generally composed of the price of crude, taxes and profit margins for refineries and retailers.

Prices have increased since the introduction of the HST. But, the main reason is that Canadian refineries use WTI crude for only about half their requirements, the rest coming from Brent North Sea oil.

Lawsuit for RIM outage?

Canadian BlackBerry users affected by Research In Motion's global outage earlier this month are being asked to join in a proposed class-action lawsuit seeking refunds for the downtime.

Consumer Law Group Inc. of Montreal said it has filed a nationwide suit against BlackBerry maker RIM and claims the company has failed to directly compensate BlackBerry users, who pay monthly data fees to wireless carriers.

"The class action involves RIM's failure to take action to either directly compensate BlackBerry users or to indirectly compensate BlackBerry users by arranging for wireless service providers to refunds their customers and to take full responsibility for these damages," the group said in a statement.

RIM is offering its 70 million BlackBerry customers worldwide $100 worth of pre-selected software applications from its BlackBerry App World.

Some users have complained they don't want the apps and would prefer to be compensated by RIM via their wireless carrier bills.

RIM Playbook

- Research In Motion is delaying the launch of an up-graded operating system for its struggling PlayBook computer tablet until February 2012, as it says the new version isn't up to its standards.
- The updated operating system was meant to be available this month with features including the ability for BlackBerry users to automatically access their email, contacts and calendar on the PlayBook.
- The updated operating system also won't have BlackBerry Messenger.

CONFESSION: I HAVE A THING FOR THE GOP

HE SAYS ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE
METRO

The U.S. has been a beacon for millions of people, but I'm probably the only person who's ever wanted to head there because of Republican presidential debates.

Yes, America's Grand Old Party is calling and I'm starting to listen.

Now before you have me maple-syruped and feathered, let me be clear: I love Canada. Anne Murray's as sexy as ever, peameal bacon wrapped in dulse and washed down with Clamato still hits the spot, and hearing the opening strains of "I'm a lumberjack and I'm OK" always brings a tear to the eye.

It's just that I find the Republicans — and the heartland that supports them — deeply alluring because, well, because they seem kind of nuts. It's a way-out foreign culture, every bit as exotic as those far-flung reaches of the globe I clamour to visit.

Canadians have a tendency to think of our southern neighbours as merely heavier, prouder, louder versions of ourselves — sort of Canucks dialed up to 11. But the Republican presidential debates remind me how wrong that is.

Usually, American TV misleads us, since it's made by liberal places that most urban Canadians find easy to swallow, like New York and Hollywood.

Watching the American TV programs I did growing up, I believed that any young American tadpole (The Muppet Show) can admit to being gay (Ellen) but continue movin' on up (The Jeffersons) until he can afford a New York loft apartment that would cost more than the Iraq invasion (Friends).

On most American TV, the U.S. seems like Canada with better temperatures and thinner people.

But the Republican debates show me a culture so different I barely comprehend it. People applaud the mention of the death penalty. Nobody seems to know what taxes are for. Rick Santorum is seen as a normal person.

This is a place I want to learn about. If this were any other continent, I'd be deeply interested. I'd want to understand.

So though my gut reaction is to roll my eyes or worse, I instead want to learn the ways of this bizarre culture.

I want to see heartland America — more Jerry Falwell, less Jerry Seinfeld. More Bible Belt, which holds up the britches of the nation. Less San Francisco, where pants are optional.

This will require research, so I plan to watch a lot of bad television, eat free-range beef and drink beer, as befits my current, close-minded understanding of heartland America.

Come to think of it, I've been researching to be an American all my life.

I'm gonna melt right in.

I do not understand why the lesbian couple did not apologize to customers of Tim Hortons for making out in a public space, in the first place.

I am more than sure that the Tim Hortons staff was aware what this couple was doing and unfortunately did nothing about it until other customers started to complain. I am more than sure, that it was not done at first out of fear.

No one should have the rights to bother others if one does not want to be sued by them for discrimination on a base of their sexual orientation and they use it to whole extent.

WEIRD NEWS

Earth invaded by Lego man

The sight of an eight-foot-tall Lego man evokes the paranormal and the unexplained, according to beachgoers on the Siesta Key Beach.

The statue, with the grammatically incorrect phrase "No real than you are" written on its chest, was discovered early Tuesday morning in Sarasota, Fla., according to the Daily Mail.

"I figured he probably fell down from up above somewhere," one man told Tampa Bay 10 News.

"I kind of think it was from the UFO people," a female passerby told the news station.

The Washington Post reported Ego Leonard, the name on the back of the statue, could also be the artist responsible for the prank. The Sarasota Herald-Tribune emailed the artist for a comment, and his reply came back written as if it was from the Lego man himself. ● METRO

You don't have to go to Ibiza, Spain, the dance club capital of the world, to see the planet's best DJs.

Ottawa native and mainstay of the city's club scene, Pat Vaillant, a.k.a. Pat Drastik, is a national champion who plays with and competes against some of the biggest names in the industry.

At 29, he's already been DJing more than half his life.

"I tried my hand DJing at a friend's place for the first time and just got hooked," he explains. "I bought my own equipment around my 14th birthday and it was a wrap, I was hooked."

Since then, he's played gigs all over the world, including Paris, London and Hong Kong.

Drastik isn't just a gifted music mixer; he's also a master turntablist.

It's how he learned to play.

"I was only interested in using the turntable as a musical instrument, manipulating sounds to create rhythms and melodies," he says.

The only showcase for his skill was competition. So he started competing in

He won three national titles and placed in the top four worldwide.

Recently, he competed in Red Bull's Thre3style competition, which gives DJ's 15 minutes to get as creative as they can with three different styles of music.

"I competed for the first time last year and ended up doing insanely well," he boasts. "I won my regional heat, won the National Final and placed third at the World Finals."

In just a few weeks, he'll be defending his Canadian title at this year's Thre3style final in Toronto.

"DJing has shaped me into the man I am today, no question," he says. "I even have two giant tattoos on my forearms of Technic 1200 turntable arms and needles. It's with me for life."

'Everything is good'

► No conflicts this time around for Kelly Clarkson

It may have taken some time, but Kelly Clarkson seems to finally be releasing an album without any drama on the side.

"Everything is good, everything is happy," she said, laughing brightly during a recent interview to promote Stronger, which was released this week.

It's a different scenario than her last two albums: She went through public disputes with legendary executive and mogul Clive Davis over her third album and with OneRepublic singer-songwriter Ryan Tedder after her last album was released.

They were typical of the bold stances she's taken that proved her to be more than the passive, malleable product of a hit TV competition, establishing her as an artist instead of just a voice.

"I've been a fighter since I started walking," she said, adding casually and genuinely a line that could be lifted from one of her inspirational songs: "We get one life. You want to make sure that you're living it how you want to live it."

Since Clarkson became the first American Idol a decade ago, she's established herself as one of pop's most formidable, and successful singers. She's sold more than 20 million

"If you look at my whole catalogue, there are far more sadder songs than happy."

albums worldwide and landed seven singles in the Billboard Hot 100 top 10.

Clarkson has maintained creative control of her music and career since her Idol days, and has written on all of her albums. But her determination to chart her own course has not come without a few battles. In 2007, Davis became concerned over the less commercial sound of Clarkson's third album, My December, which Clarkson revealed publicly after rumours of a rift; Clarkson later mended fences and called the tension overblown. Then in 2009, Clarkson called out Tedder for musical similarities between Already Gone, which he wrote for Clarkson, and Beyoncé's Halo, which he also wrote.

Clarkson calls her new collection of 13 songs "the easiest record that I've made with my label." But she makes clear that's because the suits bent to her will — not the other way around.

"I think people project on you like the formula that has worked in the past. And then they get to know you," she said. "(Now) they know me better as an artist, they know me better as a person. They know what I'm going to do and what I don't like, and it just really works." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arkells courting a wider audience

FRANK GUNN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After converting years of relentless touring into a Juno win and a major-label record deal, the Arkells have finally won the opportunity to introduce themselves to a much wider audience.

And they were careful not to overstay their welcome.

Sophomore record Michigan Left breezes by in just over 35 minutes, a disc of tuneful guitar rock songs that aim to pack the sugary jolt of a Pixy stix.

Only the yearning night-crawler Coffee clocks in over four minutes, and the Hamilton band says that brevity was, well, carefully calculated.

"It's our second record — we thought people were only going to give it so much time," said guitarist Mike DeAngelis in an interview this week in Toronto.

"So we might as well hit them, you know?"

Since releasing their debut disc Jackson Square in 2008, Arkells have earned a reputation for their fiery live show and melodic rock, which was both sufficiently stylish for discerning indie rockers and tuneful enough to wrest radio play.

But following the Juno win for new group of the year and the subsequent deal with Universal, the band faced heightened expectations for a follow-up that had been in the works for three years.

The primary hurdle? Attempting to capture the energy of their well-received live performances on disc.

"It's definitely a challenge for us," said frontman Max Kerman.

"Recording (is) a whole different ballgame because figuring out how to capture your sound is pretty difficult, and you don't always know what you're going for and it's a learning experience." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Selling old gold and silver jewelry? The bad. The ugly. The good.

Skyrocketing gold and silver prices has many consumers wondering how much their old or broken gold jewelry is worth.

The question you should be asking yourself is: where do you go to ensure you receive a fair offer? There are plenty of options but which ones pass the common sense test?

Option #1: New companies. Inflated promises. False advertising.

Anyone can post really high payout prices. There are no laws to protect unsuspecting consumers from misleading ads that promise to pay outrageous and unrealistic prices.

They use them to lure people in, then adjust weights, inaccurately evaluate material (eg. say something is 10kt when it's actually 14kt). The bottom line, people end up with less money in their pocket, not more.

Option #2: Mail away your gold. Hope for the best.

Most consumers feel uneasy about mailing their jewellery to one of the many flashy "Cash for Gold" type companies seen on TV. The truth is, several of these companies have received harsh criticism from consumer advocacy groups because of their notoriously shady sales tactics and low payouts.

So, if those ads featuring cash waving "customers" send a chill down your spine, it's for good reason.

Option #3: Recycle Frog, you be the judge.

Recycle Frog is an Ottawa-based precious metals recycling company that has built its business by serving today's more prudent middle and upper-middle-class consumer. Comprised primarily of ex-Royal Canadian Mint employees, Recycle Frog's payout rates are published, and consistently rank among the highest in the industry.

One-on-one evaluations are conducted at their many convenient public events or are pre-scheduled at their World Exchange Plaza location. They're a trusted fundraising partner to various charitable organizations including the United Way, CHEO, Christmas Exchange and The Canadian Cancer Society.

Get a competitive, hassle-free offer for your old gold and silver by simply calling Recycle Frog at 613-695-1236 or visit their website at www.recyclefrog.com for more information.

Don't be 'fooled': Our history does matter

► Conrad Black, Denise Donlon among contributors to new book 100 Days That Changed Canada

Denise Donlon writes on the day MuchMusic rocked the tube. Peter Mansbridge details when baseball player Jackie Robinson broke the colour barrier. And Conrad Black outlines a train trip by Canada's first prime minister.

Those are but a few of the essays by well-known Canadian personalities in the new book 100 Days That Changed Canada (HarperCollinsCanada), now in stores.

Editor Mark Reid says the coffee-table-style hardback is "a starting point on a journey for Canadians who want to rediscover all the turning points that have made them Canadian."

"You don't need to have a history degree to enjoy this. You don't even have to be a history buff. What you need to do is have a curiosity about your own country," he said in a recent phone interview from Winnipeg, where he serves as editor-in-chief of Canada's History national magazine (formerly The Beaver).

"I think for too long we've been fooled into thinking that our history somehow doesn't measure up, that somehow other countries' histories are more interesting and exciting."

Reid said making Canadians enthusiastic about their own country is one of the goals of Canada's History Society, which selected the 100 days for the project.

A follow-up to the best-selling 100 Photos That Changed Canada, also edited by Reid, the book outlines the trials, tribulations, and celebrations of 144 years in Canadian history.

The first essay is on July 1, 1867, when Canadians rung in Confederation, and the last chronicles Nov. 16, 2010, when Canada extended its military mission in Afghanistan. In between is a broad range of key moments in various areas, from politics and war, to culture and sports and entertainment.

Each essay is illustrated

A total of 56 writers contributed to the project, from prominent historians and authors to politicians and journalists.

by an archival photo, which come from various sources, including Library and Archives Canada, GetStock, the Toronto Star and The Canadian Press.

To pick the 100 days, Reid said he consulted with historians, advisers and archivists from both inside and outside the History Society's board of directors.

"I really wanted to let Canadians understand that there are ways the country can be changed that aren't always guys in military uniforms going over a trench, landing on the beaches," said Reid, a Pugwash, N.S., native who also wrote some of the essays as well as a section at the front and the chapter introductions.

"That there are fun moments, cultural moments, where a new craze like rock 'n' roll can change a country."

Horror without all the horrible

► Spate of horror-themed TV series celebrate thrills all year long ► Walking Dead leading the charge

Halloween-themed TV specials are popping up all over the dial this week but there's nothing special about the spooky holiday for an increasing number of shows that tell terrifying tales all year long.

Scarefests such as The Walking Dead, Ghost Hunters, True Blood and Lost Girl — as well as the upcoming American Horror Story and Grimm — are doing their part to keep Halloween running 365 days a year, making the macabre more mainstream in the process.

"In a sense you could say every episode is a Halloween episode," actor Chris Leavins says of his Canadian horror-comedy Todd and the Book of Pure Evil, which returns for a second season Sunday on Space.

Ghosts, ghouls, vampires, zombies and creatures of all sorts have overtaken the small screen — and they're no longer just relegated to specialty digital channels, says

Genre expert

Horror genre expert Teddy Wilson says specialty channels have led the way in establishing genre fare as a big draw for TV audiences.

► Quote: "Horror is hot right now. I think networks are starting to take it a lot more seriously and of course the biggest shining example right now is 'Walking Dead' breaking all sorts of records for cable and is just a great series."

genre expert Teddy Wilson of Space's flagship entertainment show InnerSpace.

He points to the CBS/Global supernatural medical drama A Gifted Man, in which a surgeon is visited by the spirit of his dead wife, and NBC/CTV's Grimm, in which a detective discovers mythological creatures living among us in disguise, as among the creepy shows targeting a broad audience.

Meanwhile, Rogers Media executive Scott Moore notes that the much-touted chiller American Horror Story has surprised FX by being the first show on the specialty network in many years to skew female, likely thanks in large part to its hunky star, Dylan McDermott of The Practice.

"Horror has grown over the last few years," says Moore, broadcasting president of Rogers Media, which launches FX Canada on Monday.

"I think a lot of it was pushed by the Twilight series in movies, but what's interesting about American Horror Story is it's not your typical horror — it's not gory, not really gory. It's more of a thriller and it's really character-driven. Over the course of the series I think it becomes... more and more about the family and more and more about the characters."

BOOZE KILLED AMY THE WORD

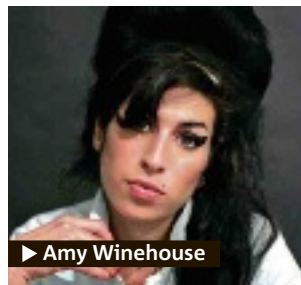

DOROTHY ROBINSON
SCENE@METRONews.ca

It wasn't drugs that killed Amy Winehouse. It was tons and tons of booze.

It was announced yesterday by a legal inquest looking into the death of the singer that she had more than five times the legal driving limit of alcohol in her blood when she died on July 23 at age 27, Reuters reports. Her death was deemed "death by misadventure" by British coroner Suzanne Greenaway, who explains that the singer died because of excessive drinking, according to the Evening Standard.

"She had consumed sufficient alcohol," Greenaway says, "and the unintended consequence of such potentially fatal levels was her sudden and unexpected death."

Even more tragic?

The London hearing states the singer had not drank alcohol that month until the day before it killed her. She had no illegal substances in her system when she died.

Not to make light of Winehouse's tragic demise but you have to shake your head at the Brit-speak. "Death by misadventure" makes it sound like she was swinging on a vine and then fell into a crocodile pit, right?

But I can tell

New day, more bail for the Lohans

The estranged father of actress Lindsay Lohan made his first appearance in court on domestic violence charges. Judge Walter Heinrich set bail at $5,000 for Michael Lohan on Wednesday. Lohan is accused of grabbing his on-and-off girlfriend and pushing her down multiple times during an argument at her Tampa condo Sunday. The judge told Lohan to stay away from 28-year-old Kate Major. Authorities say Lohan went to Major's condo and that she decided to let him stay even though she had a temporary domestic violence injunction against him in Sarasota County.

11 William St. in the Market
613-562-4581

- How does the Versace for H&M 'greatest hits' collection stack up against the real thing?
- Metro's Kenya Hunt compares the high street clothes, which are based on the luxury brand's past collections, with the expensive originals.

The archives for less

When you consider that they all tend to follow the same formula, it's hard to believe that collaborations between famous designers and mass market brands can still generate the level of excitement that Donatella Versace's new collection for H&M has.

Each launch, without fail, comes with the shiny

'Greatest hits' label attached.

But let's be honest; shoppers want dresses that scream designer, not chintzy knockoff — as in,

"Are people staring at me because they think this is the real thing or because my skirt looks flammable?" Frankly, there haven't been a whole lot of high-low collaborations that have struck the right balance.

So with that in mind, we compare H&M's latest with a few standouts from the Versace archives.

1

This dress, which is straight from the SS'12 show, has that "just off the runway" feeling. The H&M version may not have the leather strips and asymmetry that the catwalk dress does, but it impressively nails the maximal, studded to the Gods look of the original.

2

Donatella replaces the original's Greek key pattern — a trademark of the Versace house that appears on other items in the H&M collection — with graphic hearts. The patterned fringing and cut-out shoulders are just right.

3

These tropical trousers will make a colourful alternative to the festive cocktail dress for your office holiday party. That said, the H&M incarnation out-Versace's the Versace pants in loudness, even if they are missing the little baroque patterned trim at the hem.

On paper, the two are nearly identical. The flashy buckle and gilt waistband are there. But the H&M belt may turn silver after a few too many wears.

The grade

As far as greatest hits collections go, the H&M line feels more like new Versace than old. But it does a great job of recreating the brand's money-is-no-object look by steering clear of fancy fabrics that are impossible to re-do on the cheap and sticking with the fun details that make the garments stand out in the first place. That said, maybe just steer clear of the gold accessories.

Fiction to fashion

► Lost art of mending gains new following for reasons economic and environmental ► And it ain't just for gals

SEAN O'DRISCOLL/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"If you can drive a car, you can drive this," says Maya Valladares as I press the sewing machine pedal to the floor and complete my first stitch.

After years of having holes in my pants pockets, I am finally learning to fix one.

The process is more complicated than I suspected: Carefully cutting through three layers of stitches to remove the pocket lining requires the precision and patience of a surgeon. When I finally get the lining out, Valladares puts her palm underneath it and says, "See? You can see my hand through it — cheap cotton, shredded to pieces." But that's no reason to buy new pants.

This is my first class with Sewing Rebellion, a

She's sew smart

Lung-Bazile, who takes the mock-heroic name Frau Fiber when promoting Sewing Rebellion, has a history in the fabric industry.

- She worked for 15 years for a small bridal house in Lancaster, Pa., before losing her job during an economic slump.
- "I was assistant designer, production manager, I hired the models. I did it all. I really got to know the clothing industry and what it takes to get those clothes to you," she says.

group offers free classes on darning socks, sewing buttons or, for the more advanced, repurposing an old shirt or refitting a dress.

In Brooklyn, it provided use of sewing machines, needles and thread, and offered instruction and almost infinite patience for beginners. Run by a dyeing instructor at the Textile Arts Center, it even provided the onions, rusty nails, wine and chai tea used as natural dyes.

Valladares herself hasn't bought any new clothes in more than two years.

"A guilty energy develops — you stop buying because of the waste, and you can't go back to the way you were," she says.

But is it for men? I'm the only male among 12 women in this New York group.

"I can't believe it," says Valladares as she reshapes my pocket. "A roomful of women? And guys aren't interested?"

Maybe if sewing were pitched to men as rugged survivalism, it might attract more interest. "Definitely, if men could see it that way, they would show up," says Valladares.

"They should see it as a survival tool."

Sewing Rebellion was created by Carole Lung-Bazile of Los Angeles to, well, sow rebellion against consumerism with the slogan "Use it up! Wear it out! Make it do!"

Besides protecting the planet, says Lung-Bazile, "I wanted to honour the labour that created these clothes. We buy clothes cheaply and throw them away. We don't see the worker who put all that effort into creating it."

Other groups are sprouting up across the country, including Hacking Couture in New York City and Stitchy in Chicago. Participants are often drawn by a desire for camaraderie, increased environmental awareness and, of course, economic hard times.

Tricks and treats to decorate your home

STEPHANIE ORFORD
FOR METRO

Decorating the home for Halloween is a great way to have fun with family and friends.

Michaels Craft Stores has helpful webisodes where creative expert Jo Pearson demonstrates how to make Halloween décor that's affordable, easy and cute. Here are some of her suggestions:

Halloween Wreath

Decorate a black wreath with any crafts you like, such as spiders, craft cobwebs and a painted skull or two. Hang on your front door to greet guests.

Mummy Door Greeter

Entertain your trick-or-treaters with a cute mummy door greeter. Wearing disposable plastic gloves, stack and secure three craft pumpkins with a glue gun. Insert dowel rods as arms.

► Create a tempting table of treats by filling glass jars with candy, while wrapping glasses with white tape can give them the mummy look.

Wrap the pumpkins and rods with plaster wrap — cut one 30-centimetre strip of wrap at a time, quickly dip it in water, then wrap it. Add some googly eyes with hot glue, putting small pieces of plaster around them to create a wrapped look. Finish by wrapping it with cheese cloth and lightly brushing very diluted dark paint over the mummy to make it look old.

Day of the Dead Head Cake

The kit, available at Michaels, makes a beautiful fondant-covered cake with the shape and bright colours of a skull from Mexico's Day of the Dead.

Freaky Frames

Halloween up your picture frames by coating them with scrapbook paper and adding glitter paint, rhinestones and feathers.

Candy Buffet

Create a tempting table of treats by decorating glass apothecary jars and filling them with the candy of your choice. Choose candy of all shapes, sizes and colours to give the spread extra variety, and use candy moulds to make chocolate in all sorts of ghoulish forms. Drinking glasses can be wrapped with white tape and finished off with stick-on googly eyes to give your beverages the mummy look.

Find a variety of webisodes and craft instructions on Michaels.com and buy online and at locations across Canada.

As we prepare to welcome fall into our homes, we can officially leave the light, breezy tones of summer behind and turn to the deeper shades of the upcoming winter season.

The classic colours associated with autumn are burnt oranges, brick reds, dark plums and deep cranberries.

Bright, crisp colours feel less fashionable now and the colours of fall are dramatic, strong and exotically sophisticated.

Some may recognize these trendy tones as those that defined decor of the '70s and '80s (remember rust corduroy sofas and E-ZBrick faux walls?) but what goes around rarely comes back the same way.

Deep reds and rusty oranges have reappeared in more formal textures like silk, rather than the casual corduroy and heavy fabrics of their past lives.

Warm greys and cool taupes are still the ultimate neutral, but pops of spiced colour on a focal point or accessory are fun ways to bring in colour without a major commitment.

Adding small kicks of deep purple, brick red, rich pinks or dark orange to an accent wall, patterned pillow, glass lamp, or two side chairs in a living room can make a big impact with the trends.

The best way to incorporate the sophisticated drama of fall's hottest hues is to contain it to small areas around your space.

► Kilim upholstered sofa adds fall's rich purple and red in an exotic way. Kilim Sofa, West Elm Paint the inside walls of a coat closet in a bold, high-gloss colour and get a big burst of shine every time you open the door.

Perk up forgotten spaces like small ceiling areas in an entryway or powder room and add punch by simply painting your linen closet door a strong trend colour.

Beyond walls and ceilings, furniture can also be updated with a dash of drama.

The interior of an armoire or china cabinet could be painted or wallpapered to leave just a hint of colour and texture peeking through.

► Benjamin Moore's Rhubarb is fall's go-to fashion colour.

High-gloss provides sheen and shine, allowing hits of colour to really stand out while adding glamour.

Consider reupholstering your dining room seat cushions a rich purple, rust or cranberry to add a surprise of colour when dining.

► An accent wall painted Benjamin Moore's Rhubarb can warm up a neutral space.

► Add colour to your space with exotic accessories like genuine Kantha throws, Pottery Barn.

1 Make white walls your best friend

Resist temptation to cover your walls in trendily-flocked wallpaper or colour-blocked primary colours and stick to clean white. The lightness will open up your tiny space.

5 ways to make a small space look big

KENYA HUNT

METRO WORLD NEWS

Choose your space savers wisely

Overdoing it with these can actually make your place look smaller and more crowded. Be strategic in what you buy — a magnetic knife bar and a pot and pan rack for the kitchen, for instance, or a few underbed storage boxes for the bedroom (but skip all the closet hanging bags, which can actually create more bulk).

2 Consider a hall of mirrors

Walls covered in mirrors made a palatial gallery at Versailles look three times as massive. The same will work for your tiny studio. Cover one wall of one room, or hallway, in paneled mirrors and watch your place double in size.

3 Make those nooks and crannies multitask

You don't need an extra room to have a proper home office. Many apartments come with random, compact spaces that would actually better suit a desk and work of art (like in the photo on the right) rather than a large potted floor plant.

4 Determine your focal point

Rather than loading your place down with lots of little quirky details, try making one big statement piece the centre of your place — a brightly coloured couch or grand dining table for instance — and decorating around that. It will reduce the sense of clutter while still displaying your sense of personal style.

RICHARD PECKETT
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

"Right, I'm off to bed." The question is, what exactly are you getting into? A luxurious Vi-Spring bed? Or perhaps a frightful, spongy creation that landlords lovingly provide for students?

Thinking about beds may seem like a trivial thing, especially if you consider a pal's sofa an ideal resting spot.

However, as renowned London back specialist Noël Kingsley explains, "The lack of support from sleeping on poor mattresses can cause the spine to twist, shorten or even lead to lumbar back pain and the pinching of nerves in the upper thoracic spine."

So, with those rather crippling comments in mind, let's find out what lies beneath one's slumbering self.

Lucy Helmore, the buyer for beds and furniture at the world-famous department store Harrods, advises that the finest mattresses are packed with variable compositions of "horsetail hair, Shetland wool, bamboo, cotton, cashmere, latex and steel springs. Generally, I would avoid man-made materials because they're not as breathable."

However, there is one exception and that's the space-age memory foam mattress. The plus side of this rather cerebral-sounding bed-fellow are that, "it moulds perfectly to the body and remains stable even if you are sleeping next to a wiggly partner. But beware. Memory foam can make for a rather hot night!" explains the buyer.

It's obvious but if you invest more money into a bed, you will guarantee not just a finer product but you'll also wake up refreshed and well-rested.

If you have ever wondered how royals and the super-rich sleep at night, look no further than the Vi-Spring Majesty priced for around $111,400 — that's the same as a premium car or a holiday home in a former Soviet bloc.

While most of us can only dream of drifting away on the Majesty, we'll probably have to settle for an inferior high-street king or queen size bed.

But why the regal name? "Historically, the bedroom was where royals conducted business," Helmore says.

It's rumoured that kings literally got into bed together to seal deals. Yes, the royals have always kept things cosy but they were right about one thing and that's the importance of a bloody good bed.

Sleeping beauty

As told by Noël Kingsley, teacher of the Alexander Technique (for posture)

- 1 Posture: Sleeping on your stomach should be avoided as this can squash the ribcage and cause neck tension and pain.
- 2 Soft or firm: If one sleeps on the side, two pillows may be necessary for sufficient support as there can be a distance of 10 cm from shoulder to side of head.

- 3 Reading support: It's best to be supported by two or three pillows behind your back. Sit up, relax your arms and keep your neck free.

- 4 Showroom test-drive: Remember: you need to lie down on a bed for at least 15 minutes.

- 5 The long and short of it: A short bed can cause cramp and a shortening of the spine. Remember that if you are of a heavier build, a firmer mattress may be preferable.

Make a wine crate display case

- Turn your drinking habit into home decor fun
- Create shelving for favourite books, knick-knacks

DIY IDEAS

No matter what size our home is, most of us are always in need of more storage space.

Rather than covering up more precious counter-space, Design Sponge contributors Derek Fagerstrom and Lauren Smith decided to add wall shelves made from recycled wine crates they found at their local wine shop.

To add more detail, Lauren and Derek lined the back of the shelves with colourful, inexpensive gift wrap to act as a backdrop for their favourite books and tiny treasures.

Steps

1. Use a tape measure to measure the interior of each crate to make sure you have enough fancy paper to line all of them.

2. Next, draw out the measurements in pencil on the back of the paper.

In order to avoid any potential gaps along the interior edges, add a one-inch allowance as follows.

Long sides: Add one inch to each of the three edges that border the interior of the box.

Short sides: Add one inch to the edge that borders the back of the box.

Back piece: No allowance.

3. Using a straightedge and an X-ACTO knife, carefully cut out each piece of lining paper (five per box).

Create fold lines by scoring along the one-inch allowance with a bone folder.

Finally, miter each of the interior corners at the allowance by cutting a 45-degree angle from the outside edge in.

4. In a well-ventilated area, apply spray adhesive to the back of each of your long pieces.

Place them carefully inside the box, lining up the folded edges with the inside edges of the box, and smoothing out any air bubbles that may appear in the paper.

Next, spray and apply the short pieces. At this point, all four sides of the box will be lined, and the back will have a one-inch pletely before proceeding to the next step.

The last step is to spray and apply the back piece to the box.

5. Decide on the orientation of your boxes, and attach a sawtooth hanger along the top edge of the back of each box using a hammer and small nails.

Apply peel-and-stick rubber bumpers at the bottom corners on the back of each box, to ensure that they hang flat against the wall.

6. Mark the position of each box on the wall with a pencil and attach the boxes using the appropriate hanging hardware.

Ni Hao from China.

As some of you may know, I am currently traveling in China on business, so my column for the next 10 days comes from Beijing and Shanghai.

Today from Beijing I wanted to share with you a laundry tip.

Now I hope I don't disappoint you, but my Tide To Go Stick is by far one of a butler's best friends!

Because of airline luggage restrictions and costs for additional pieces, travellers need to pack as moderately as possible.

Therefore if you are travelling for any extended period of time, doing laundry while away becomes necessary.

So how do we deal with daily stains such as soup on your tie or ketchup on your shirt?

Remember a few good stain removal techniques to use while on the road.

1. Club Soda: This is always great to use when trying to rinse a stain, like white wine, through your garment.

2. Commercial Remover such as a Tide to Go Stick. Now just for the record, I am not paid by Tide to speak on their behalf. I just like their product. This is great for fresh food and drink stains.

3. PH neutral Soap such as Johnson's Baby Shampoo, a small container in your toiletries bag is a big help. Remember PH neutral soap is great on grease stains.

So how does all of this relate to travel?

Remember the number one laundry rule: before you launder any garment you must check the label and get the stain out before washing.

By pre-treating stains, you can hand over your garment to the hotel laundry department with little worry.

Now some of you may wonder why not just let the hotel worry about the stain — my answer to that is if I am far away from home, and have a favourite clothing item, I don't want to entrust it to someone I don't know.

Therefore I pre-treat the stain once I hand over the garment to the hotel and I don't have to worry about their stain removal abilities.

Now for another question:

Dear Charles the butler, A few questions related to the care of shoes:

- Do you remove the laces when you polish them?
- Do you have any special tips for how to apply polish, shine, and buff?

- How do you re-lace the shoes?

Thanks in advance,
Tongue Tied

Dear Tongue Tied, As you may already know, gentlemen in particular are often judged by the way they care for their shoes.

This is an essential part of a man's wardrobe that should never be overlooked.

1. Always remove shoelaces before you polish your shoes, otherwise you will get polish on the laces, and this in turn gets on your hands.

2. Hard paste is the most common type of polish, and should be applied with a clean, dry rag. Use very little polish as you can always add more, and too much makes buffing your shoes that much harder.

3. Shoes should always be re-laced as you found them. Today's butlers take a picture of how they were laced and once the shoe has been polished will re-lace the shoes as before.

Speaking of shoes, I'm off to walk the Great Wall of China and think about my next column.

Why air your dirty laundry?

► Get your clothes off the floor once and for all ► Laundry hampers can be decorative, useful and fun

When we were young, “laundry hamper” might have referred to the floor under the bed.

A little later, it may have meant a mesh sack kept by the front door, with a pouch full of quarters for the laundromat.

But we are grown-ups now. An attractive receptacle for the day’s castoffs is one of the small civilized gifts we give ourselves.

It’s generally a modest investment that banishes the chaos, and brings in the calm that is the hallmark of a well-kept home.

For contemporary bath or bedroom suites, consider Bed, Bath & Beyond’s sophisticated black faux leather hamper with removable basket, or West Elm’s sleek white lacquered cylindrical hamper.

Hampton Bay has a beautiful tilt-door double hamper that’s really a piece of furniture; it would work as a vanity as well, and comes in white or hazel wood finish. (homedecorators.com, $209)

Seville also makes a professional-looking three-bag rack on a sturdy metal frame, complete with telescoping hanging rack and locking wheels. (seville-classics.com, $59.99)

Beer treats

► Plan a Halloween party worthy of a cult following with these lager and ale suggestions

JEFF
FOR METRO

As a child, dressing up and trick-or-treating would yield an unthinkable variety of treats that you wouldn't normally enjoy, so why should this change as an adult?

Save the everyday beers for your regular parties, as this is clearly a very special drinking occasion and your beverage selection should reflect your adventurous side ... after all, the best thing a Silver Bullet can do for you on All Hallow's Eve is kill a werewolf.

A Halloween party is an opportunity for you to host the most creative and colourful bash of the year.

After you take the time to find the right costumes, lighting, decorations, party favours, and frightfully fun music and a cast of ghouls and guys to make your Halloween party absolutely spook-tacular, why stop there when the LCBO offers up a wicked selection of beers that can make your party a bloody success.

Devil's Pale Ale (Great Lakes Brewing, Ont.) has a huge 666 on the label and a clever inspired brewing concept — the beer is the colour of a deep mahogany coffin with tan foam cap. It will take your taste buds on a terrifyingly fun roller-coaster ride.

Hobgoblin (Wychwood Brewery, England) is the "Unofficial Beer of Halloween." This legendary British craft ale is a deep ruby copper with light tan head, which is silky smooth and full-bodied supernaturally delicious.

Dead Guy Ale (Rogue Brewing, U.S., with a tip of the hat to the Grateful Dead). This world-class Maibock from Oregon is an eerily hazy amber colour with a tight white head — very smooth with a subtle after bite.

The Mort Suite Brewery in Belgium provides two Lambic fruit beers that both pour a dull, blood red with pink tinged lacing and will cure your morbid obsession for candy treats. Mort Subite translates to "Sudden Death" and its Framboise is jam-packed with explosive and fizzy raspberry tartness and notes of oak and vanilla. Its Kriek will definitely provide the sugar rush you may be craving. Sharp, tart sour mixes with ripe dark cherry sweetness and a mouth-puckering dry finish — perfect to pair with dark chocolate.

St. Ambroise Pumpkin

► Beau's All Natural Brewing has its Split Seven Inch Series, which features Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Ale (McAuslan Brewery, Que.) is a seasonal classic pours clear, deep amber with a tight white head. Scrumptious and sweet with bright splashes of cinnamon and nutmeg with hints of banana bread highlight a liquid baked pumpkin pie drinking experience.

Beau's All Natural Brewing (Vankleek Hill, Ont.) presents its Split Seven Inch Series — a frightfully awesome kit that features two new organic beers — Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Dr. Jekyll enjoys all the best split personality traits of Beau's Lugtread Lagered Ale and NightMarzen in this brassy brew with huge, white bubbling head. Refreshing and sessionable, the beer has grassy clean citrus hoppiness and toasty bready malt undertones that accentuate the pure beer enjoyment that Beau's always delivers.

Mr. Hyde is a potent marriage of German rye beer and West Coast IPA styles. The spiciness of the rye is the star here — earthy/woody tones mute the prickly piney hops while delicate lemon rind and bold rye continue to dance right through the finish. This is one howl of a good beer.

So if the things that go bump in the night are people fleeing from your lame party — don't blame me — my evil laboratory will definitely be rocking.

Happy Halloween!

Everyone welcome at Sanguicchio's

SAMANTHA EVERTS
FOR METRO

All the locals know Sanguicchio's is the way to go!

Little Italy delicatessen Sanguicchio's is a neighbourhood gem frequented by construction workers to diplomats daily.

Charismatic owner Genio Lenzi can be found behind the counter chopping vegetables and welcoming everyone with the same warm smile, treating you as an old friend, not customer.

"Good to see you again," he will call out as you enter his shop.

Sanguicchio's specialty is Italian-style sandwiches; simple, delicious sandwiches with the fresh quality ingredients using crusty Art-Is-In Rosemary-

- All day breakfast sandwich with homemade sausages is available.

garlic bread. Try the "MPLT," or mortadella, provolone, lettuce and tomatoes.

Relax and joke with the owner as he slices generous portions of Italian cold cuts.

A delicious take on the tuna sandwich, his has no mayo but capers, olives and tomato. "I like to keep it simple," says Lenzi.

All are served with a wonderfully marinated side salad with perfectly-ripe tomatoes, cucumbers and olives. The vegetarian option is exceptional, stuffed with veggies like spicy eggplant, roasted peppers, thick slices of cheese and a dab of his famous hot sauce, jars of which are sold in store.

Being a popular, family-run shop, things run out quickly, like popular prosciutto, but Lenzi will come around the counter with an espresso on the house and an even better option.

"I only sell what I like to eat," says Lenzi, who clearly takes much pride from seeing his customers enjoy his food. And trust us, you will.

Expect to wait at least 10 minutes. Daily specials and a children's menu are available. Cash only.

Gluten: An important part of nutrition

FARM TO FORK

There seems to be concern and confusion regarding gluten in the diet.

First, what is it?

It's a protein, found mainly in wheat, but also in other grains such as barley and rye. As such, it is for most people a healthy part of their diet, particularly for those who wish to avoid meat. Thanks to the early domestication of wheat, it has been an important source of human nutrition since the beginning of organized agriculture, some 10,000 years ago.

Because it is an exceptionally long and strong molecule, it provides the qualities that make bread rise and form a robust loaf without crumbling. A sandwich would be impossible without the latter characteristic.

But why is there concern and avoidance of gluten in the diet by some?

For the one to two per cent of the population with celiac disease, they should definitely avoid all products containing gluten. There are also people with a wheat allergy, estimated to be less than 10 per cent of the population, who can overcome this hardship with standard allergy treatment, but gluten avoidance is probably a wise dietary choice.

Furthermore, less than one per cent of the population suffers from gluten-sensitive idiopathic neuropathy and should avoid products containing wheat. Also there is inconclusive evidence that those with autism can have this affliction aggravated with gluten.

However, there is no peer-reviewed research that provides any grounds for concern beyond the three or possibly four conditions mentioned above. As food products that contain no wheat components are labelled as gluten free to assist such people, the logic then seems to flow that if gluten is to be avoided by some, then it's best for the remaining 85 per cent of the population to be on the safe side and reduce or eliminate such products from the diet.

The bottom line is that everyone is free to choose what they eat and if an individual wishes not to consume gluten, the choice is theirs. However, given the effort involved to avoid this very common food ingredient, the majority of people should perhaps relax on the gluten issue and direct their concern to other, more critical dietary matters.

Reel Food Festival aims to educate, entertain

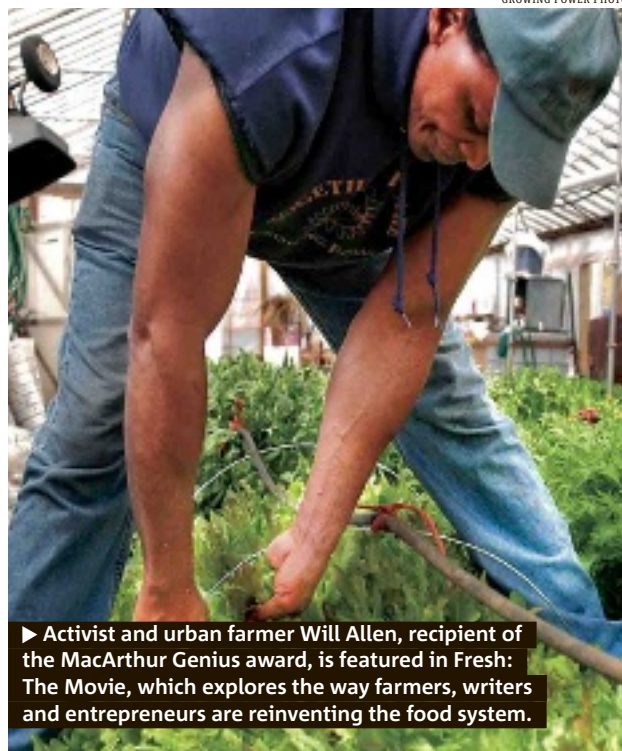

SAMANTHA
FOR METRO

The Morgan Spurlock film Supersize Me may have grabbed your attention (and grossed you out) over food security issues in 2004, but what's being done in the heartland of America since?

The Reel Food Festival has once again returned to the Ottawa Public Library with the intention of education and entertaining people with "food issues" like themselves.

The films presented seek to explore a more sustainable way of producing food needed to survive. Assorted short films will be presented among the features today at the Metcalf branch on the final day of the festival.

Feature documentary film Fresh: The Movie celebrates and explores the way farmers, writers and entrepreneurs are reinventing the food system from the way they farm to what is sold in grocery stores. Each of the individuals interviewed has witnessed the rapid changes from an agricultural to industrial model, and experienced the consequences like food contamination, environmental impact, and obesity.

► Activist and urban farmer Will Allen, recipient of the MacArthur Genius award, is featured in Fresh: The Movie, which explores the way farmers, writers and entrepreneurs are reinventing the food system.

"Cheap food is an illusion. The real cost of the food is paid somewhere," Michael Pollan, author of The Omnivore's Dilemma, says in the film.

By documenting healthier, sustainable and alternative ways producers in America have succeeded, Canadians will easily relate, say festival organizers.

The film begins at 6 p.m. and is presented with support from Just Food, the Good Food Box, USC Canada and One World Arts. They will be there with information and to answer questions about what you can do on a local level. Admission is free, but a $5 donation is suggested.

The Ottawa Public Library Main Branch is located at 120 Metcalf St. For more information, see reelfoodfilmfestival.ca.

► The Senators see great potential in Mika Zibanejad, but the team believes sending him back to Sweden ensures he can develop in a situation where he will get top-line minutes.

“I think the reason we’re probably sending him back is that we want him to have the puck, we want him to have a chance to score points, to be a legitimate top-six NHL player.”

ON THE DECISION TO SEND MIKA ZIBANEJAD BACK TO SWEDEN

► Sens send top-pick Zibanejad back to Sweden for further development

It wasn't the decision Mika Zibanejad was hoping for, but one he accepted with grace.

The Ottawa Senators sent their 2011 first-round draft pick back to Swedish club team Djurgardens yesterday rather than burn the first year of his entry-level contract.

Zibanejad appeared in nine games for the Senators this season, registering one assist and a minus-3 rating. A tenth game with Ottawa would have meant the 18-year-old was sticking in the NHL.

“I really wanted to stay but they have more experience in this stuff than I do,” said Zibanejad, who was taken sixth overall at June's draft. “I think this is best for me and I'm excited to go back home.”

The Stockholm native played his ninth and final game with the Senators on Tuesday night in Carolina.

Ottawa can't recall him until his European season is over, unless it's under emergency circumstances.

Djurgardens has assured the Senators that Zibanejad will play a crucial role, including first-line minutes and power-play time.

“He might not reach that status with our team this year,” said Senators general manager Bryan Murray.

“We think for the long-term development of him, to give him an opportunity to become what we believe he has a chance to become, and that is a quality NHL player, that this is the right step for him at this moment.”

While he would have enjoyed the chance with the Senators, Zibanejad looks at the decision as an opportunity for personal growth.

“I guess I get a bigger role back home and I feel comfortable with the game and I feel comfortable with everything outside the ice and just focusing on improving my game,” he said. “It's sad, but on the other hand it's a good thing for me and a good option for me to improve my game.”

Zibanejad is eligible to represent Sweden at the world junior hockey championship in Alberta this winter.

Series delayed in soggy St. Louis

PAUL SANCYA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Game 6 of the World Series was postponed yesterday because of a wet forecast, delaying the Texas Rangers' bid to clinch their first championship.

Major League Baseball announced the decision about 4 ½ hours before the Rangers and St. Louis Cardinals were set to play. At the time, no rain had fallen at Busch Stadium, but heavy precipitation was expected.

Texas leads the Series 3-2. Game 6 was rescheduled for tonight at 8:05 p.m. If necessary, Game 7 will be played tomorrow night.

“Because of the forecast, there was no reason to wait any longer,” said Joe Torre, MLB's executive vice-president of baseball operations.

Torre said he told managers Ron Washington of Texas and Tony La Russa of St. Louis yesterday that if the forecast didn't change, MLB would postpone Game 6 early.

Rain was in “every forecast we had probably for the last three days,” Torre said at a news conference. “They were all consistent there was going to be rain during the game.”

Colby Lewis was set to start for Texas, with Jaime Garcia ready to go for the Cardinals. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Game 7 scenarios

The extra day may lead to more intrigue over who will pitch for St. Louis should the Series go to Game 7.

- Rangers manager Ron Washington already has said Matt Harrison would start.
- Kyle Lohse would be on regular rest but has struggled in the playoffs for the Cardinals. Chris Carpenter, who allowed two runs in seven innings in Game 5, has volunteered on short rest.

Michalek living up to expectations early on

THE HOCKEY NEWS

MURRAY PAM
OTTAWA@METRONEWS.CA

If you are superstitious, touch wood before reading the rest of this column. Why? Milan Michalek is healthy and feeling stronger than he ever has since joining the Senators in 2009.

In his first two seasons with Ottawa, Michalek missed 32 games and one playoff round due to a variety of injuries (torn knee ligament, broken foot, concussion). Over the summer, with the intent of having a healthier season, he amped up his exercise regimen while training with ex-Senator and fellow Czech Republic native, Martin Havlat and the early results

Michalek is off to the best start of his eight-year career, netting six goals in nine games, trailing only Toronto's Phil Kessel, Pittsburgh's James Neal and Buffalo's Thomas Vanek league-wide.

He is also an integral cog in coach Paul MacLean's third-ranked power play, leading the league in PP goals with four. None have been more dramatic than this past Saturday's winner. While utilizing his 6-foot-2, 225-pound frame to fight off Grant Clitsome, Michalek was able to redirect the puck in with 4.7 ticks remaining to lead the Senators in their improbable come-from-behind victory over the Blue Jackets.

The Senators were offensively-challenged last sea-

"The Senators were offensively-challenged last season scoring only 192 goals, the second-worst output in their history. Michalek is being relied upon more than ever to help in that department."

son scoring only 192 goals, the second-worst output in their history. Michalek, a four-time 20-goal scorer, is being relied upon more than ever to help in that department. Currently, he is on pace for an improbable 50-goal season — the Sens would gladly take 30 which seems more realistic. The 25-year-old has formed decent chemistry on a line with Colin Greening and Jason Spezza, combining for 15 points over three games.

And while general manager Bryan Murray will always be vilified for not prying away enough talent from San Jose for Dany Heatley, it should be noted Michalek is the only player left standing with the team he was traded to in that 2006 swap. As we know, Heatley fell out of favour with the Sharks, mostly for disappearing in the playoffs, and was shipped to Minnesota — ironically for Michalek's friend, Havlat.

That's not to declare the Sens the winner of the ballyhooed trade. That chapter is yet to be finalized. Michalek has three seasons remaining on his contract, including this one with a cap hit of $4.3 million. The last year pays $6 million. Those are lofty figures and should, rightly, prompt lofty expectations. If this stretch to start the season isn't an aberration, those may prove to be dollars well-invested.
